Editor:
As executive director of The Buckeye, I would like to comment on the article written in the April 13 edition under the Week in Weed section, entitled “Farmer to Farmer.” I would like to point out that The Buckeye is one of the few NGOs to have an official, published position paper on commercial marijuana cultivation. I would not call this belated at all. As we saw legalization of recreational marijuana happen in November of 2016, and as our local and state governments are all grappling with the legal framework for commercial marijuana cultivation, this seemed a prime opportunity for The Buckeye to stand up for our membership in a topic that has dramatically impacted our rural land owners. The first step in standing up for our members was to create an official position on commercial marijuana cultivation.

In the position paper, The Buckeye has real concerns about the long-term environmental impacts of the marijuana industry on Humboldt County’s natural resources. The Buckeye believes that growers/permit holders are not being held accountable for the environmental degradation caused by marijuana cultivation that has occurred over the last five decades.

The Buckeye position paper also states that the marijuana industry must be held to the same regulatory standards as farming, timber, dairy and ranching. We must hold commercial marijuana cultivation to the same standards as every other industry. We strongly believe that all codes and permits must be in place before cultivation occurs.

The Buckeye is also concerned that there has been a significant loss of open space provided by ranches because of the artificially inflated property prices caused by the commercial marijuana industry. These ranches have been subdivided, developed and subsequently intensely cultivated for marijuana production.

To see The Buckeye’s full position paper, please visit our website: www.buckeyeconservancy.org.

Racists Among Us

Editor:
I would like to give my deepest condolences to the mother of David Josiah Lawson (“What Now?” May 4). As a mother, I feel the outrage at senseless violence taking the life of her son in his prime.

I am white and I have friends of many races. There is a lot of mixing in Arcata and there are many people, both black and white, who are not racist and, matter of fact, they enjoy each other’s differences.

But I would like to encourage the black community to protect itself. There are cruel and ignorant people of every color. Humboldt County has an old and long history of racism. There is a good-old-boy mentality mixed in with the open-minded, hip people. Many of the white families who have lived here for generations feel invaded by not only hippies but by people of color. They are not greeting change with open arms or open minds. They feel themselves slipping into a minority within the community. The college as well as the marijuana industry have attracted people with different view points to the area. The old “white is right” is falling away into a more cosmopolitan viewpoint. When people feel their world changing beyond their control, there can be a lashing out at an obvious scapegoat.

So, please, for your mothers’ sake, steer clear of chaotic, unsupervised situations with a lot of white people. And if so, choose non-confrontation and escape rather than in-your-face power struggles. Changing inequality is a long-term job. Racism dissipates when parents and teachers talk openly and candidly about the effects of racist attitudes and institutional prejudice, and when people have positive contact with other people of different races. So let this not deter us from reaching across lines of race to see each other for who we are on the inside.

Jennifer Bishop, Arcata

Editor:
Was David’s death and the sad manner in which the emergency response team handled everything race related? Of course it was! “White” people created the concept of race and then pretend like they are colorblind. The local media painted a good picture of the suspect and frequently used the word “allegedly,” but if the suspect were black the narrative would be different and he surely wouldn’t be released from jail to await trial while more evidence was being collected on a pending investigation.

This system (which favors “whites”) is flawed. My son was nearly punished as if he had committed the ultimate crime for simply having brass knuckles and displaying them. Threats of removing him from my custody and placing him as a ward of the court until age 21 was the impending punishment for his “crime.” He was charged with a felony and his offense was labeled “very serious.” He is black, so I have no shadow of a doubt that he was going to be given the harshest punishment. The person pressing charges boasted to me about how her white mother taught her how to work the system.

And the nerve of the Arcata chief of police to spout that fairness crap and feel like his officers are being demonized. I know from personal experience that officers see our kind as bad or threatening and the smallest of crimes gets serious charges

Fourth World

Where are you, boy who never was?
Draped dead in your father’s arms.
Shrouding dust blown by hellish winds
Held settled only by your family’s blood.

Where are you going, mother who cannot be?
Looking for a child perhaps?
Looking for a world perhaps?
Those hidden well enough to live?
Well, there are none.
Who of peace escapes a sudden poison?
All you nurtured has been taken.

Where are you now, land that never was?
Another ruin of earth, hardly seen.
Featureless, but for spots where people died,
golden jewelry of war, scattered in necklaces
on a ground,
imprinted with the silhouettes of innocents.

Where are you now, men of steel and poison?
who say you never were?
Blown in and out on storms of hate.
Wringing life from goodness
until earth vomits blood and tears.
Crushed. Gasping up her people to you,
as of this land you make a place,
only a Devil could dream for men.

— L. Strattnner

when it’s a black person committing the crime. It’s becoming clearer with each passing day that racists are here in Humboldt County, and they don’t want our kind here. Just like a local commented on social media that our kind can go to all sorts of good schools where we come from, why even come to Humboldt?! So what now?

Two men, 20 minutes and the fracture in Arcata."

I find it hard to believe that this is the title you give to the brutal slaying of David Josiah Lawson.

These are not just two men. One was an innocent, beautiful, leader of the community with everything to live for. The other is a man accused of brutal murder, whose girlfriend audibly and repeatedly wished for David's death as he lay bleeding to death.

The title alone paints a picture of David and his (alleged) murderer on the same plane. How about a title and article that changes the focus, such as "What next for McKinleyville man accused of brutal murder at college party?"

It sickens me to have to point out that this was not just 20 minutes. This mimics the sentiment in the case of rapist and Stanford student Brock Turner, whose father pointed out that 20 minutes of action (rape) should not ruin his son's life. What is this need to point out that white people can do hideous things in short periods of time? Do people of color get treated with such regard and gentleness? "Well, the crime didn't take very long so ..."

As far as the fracture in Arcata, the murder of young Mr. Lawson did not cause this fracture. This fracture has long existed in Arcata, the United States and the world.

It is perpetuated by articles like this, which frame the narrative to ask questions like, "Did the victim act badly enough to deserve what he got?" "Did the victim's friends act calmly enough as their friend lay dying?" and "Was the accused a nice enough guy for us to be upset about it?"

David Josiah Lawson (say his name) you will be deeply missed.

I hope that NCJ and Mr. Greenon will rethink their approach.

Hannah Virginia, Arcata

Split Eureka council passes code of conduct

By Kimberly Wear

kim@northcoastjournal.com

San Francisco Ethics Commission Chair Peter Keane believes the Eureka City Council was headed down the right path when members recently debated whether elected and appointed officials should make political endorsements.

In fact, the law professor embraces the idea that office holders, in general, should be restricted from throwing their support behind candidates. But that's not the route councilmembers ended up taking.

Instead, a split council — with Austin Allison and Marian Brady dissenting — voted last week to approve a code of conduct that allows elected and appointed officials to make endorsements as long as their titles are not used.

Brady and Allison unsuccessfully pushed to keep the status quo, saying it's a traditional part of the campaign process and they wanted to retain the ability to back qualified candidates.

"The name as well as the title ... hold weight," Allison said in his attempts to have the decision be an individual choice, noting the change would impact future councils as well.

Brady also questioned the point of removing designations like councilmember from endorsements, saying to the other board members, "You'll never be John Q. Public, because we're not."

After the meeting, Brady said she was left wondering if the majority had an "attack of conscience" in casting their votes, referencing when Councilmembers Natalie Arroyo and Kim Bergel signed Allison's last minute nomination papers at city hall.

"It's a little odd," she said.

According to Keane, there's no real consensus in California on the issue, with some cities and counties have varying levels of prohibition while others don't regulate the political rite of passage for candidates despite the benefits he sees in no-endorsement policies.

What gives the law professor and the former public defender of San Francisco pause in Eureka's case, however, were concerns voiced by some councilmembers during the discussion.

Arroyo had raised the possibility of shutting down endorsements across the board, citing — among other issues — the "potential to negatively impact our working relations with people later."

Such a policy, she said, would also take pressure off councilmembers who may feel obligated to endorse.

Bergel echoed similar sentiments during the discussion, saying they need to "be able to work together as a team."

"Two councilmembers did endorse me," she said, "and it was divisive."

A policy against endorsements would not be an infringement on individual First Amendment rights if it was laid out as an ethics issue, Keane said, noting a seat at the dais comes with requirements not placed on the average citizen.

For example, he and other members of the ethics commission cannot endorse candidates because of their role in investigating public officials.

"If a city wants to have a prohibition ... that's considered to be a beneficial approach because one of the things it does, from an ethical standpoint, it prevents all sort of quid pro quo situations," said Keane, who also served as San Francisco's chief assistant public defender from 1979 to 1998.

If people don't want to give up the ability to endorse, he said, they don't have to run for office or accept an appointed position.

But, Keane notes, those restrictions should be set down for the right reasons: Namely to avoid the perception or reality of political favoritism or other types of corruption.

Concerns about simmering tensions and whether taking sides in a race could damage the council's ability to work together are more appropriate for the playground than the political arena, he said.

Keane said he found that line of reasoning "interesting" but misguided.

"If you don't want hurt feelings, don't go into politics," he said. "Those reasons are totally without merit."

While he appreciates the idea of wanting people to be nice to each other, Keane also notes that "you can't legislate against human nature."

The Sacramento-based Institute for Local Government also offers up some red flags on the subject, noting that "agreeing to take an action in return for a person or group's endorsement is just as much a violation of criminal laws against bribery as making commitments in return for campaign contributions."

"Whenever a group asks you to take a position that conflicts with your sense of what best serves your constituents' interests, you are in a danger zone," an ethics column by the nonprofit affiliate of the League of California Cities and the California State Association of Counties states. "You may be tempted to think that you need the group's endorsement — or a series of groups' endorsements — to get elected and do good things for your community."

The endorsement topic came up during the Eureka council's May 2 discussion on a set of standards that the city's appointed and elected officials will now be expected to follow in their interactions with the public, the media, staff and each other — all centered around a theme of respect.

Mostly gleaned from the city of Sunnyvale's code, the hefty document included an added passage that states in part: "Councilmembers may support board and commission members who are running for office, other than for City Council, but not in an official forum in their capacity as a Councilmember."

The board eventually threw out that sentence and allowed endorsements for all offices as long as an individual's title wasn't used and the support was not made during official duties — like at a council meeting.

While the council expressed appreciation — as well as surprise — at receiving a 20-page document, including a 'Checklist for Monitoring Conduct' and glossary of terms, the rest of the code was passed as written.

Council conduct will now include addressing each other by their title and last name and a councilmember offended by remarks at the dais can call a "point of personal privilege" to challenge the other member "to justify or apologize for the language used."

This all came about at the suggestion of councilmembers during a strategic visioning session

"Well," Mayor Frank Jager said after the conversation that included collective moments of confusion, a few terse exchanges and what at times seemed to be an airing of grievances by Brady. "That only took an hour." ●

How a defense team's gamble crumbled the case against Kyle Zoellner, and where it goes from here

By Thadeus Greenson

newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

It was a bold move, and one Humboldt County deputy public defenders Luke Brownfield and Kelly Neel weren't fully committed to until the last possible minute.

It was the morning of May 1, and their client, 23-year-old Kyle Christopher Zoellner, had been in jail for 16 days since he was beaten, bloodied and arrested before dawn on April 15 in front of a home on Arcata's Spear Avenue and accused of fatally stabbing David Josiah Lawson, a 19-year-old Humboldt State University sophomore, at a house party.

Under California law, a criminal defendant has a right to go before a judge for what's called a preliminary — or a probable cause — hearing within 10 days of being arraigned in a case. It's a law designed to safeguard the rights of the accused by essentially prohibiting police and prosecutors from locking people up and sorting out the facts later. To proceed to trial under the law, prosecutors must convince a judge that they have enough evidence to cause an ordinary person to believe or strongly suspect the guilt of the accused. It's a much lower threshold than the beyond-a-reasonable-doubt standard required at trial.

The thing is, though, criminal defendants almost always waive this right to a speedy probable cause hearing (a number of local attorneys told the Journal last week that they can't recall a murder case in which a defendant has ever exercised this right). That's because the burden for holding a defendant to stand trial is so low it's seen as a virtual lock for prosecutors. With that in mind, defense attorneys generally prefer to treat preliminary hearings almost as practice trials — chances to test witnesses and probe weaknesses in a case — so they'll be better prepared when the case lands in front of a jury.

But back on that first morning in May, Neel and Brownfield were preparing to do the unconventional.

"We were talking about it all the way up until the moment before the preliminary hearing started, whether this was the right decision or not," Brownfield would say five days later, after Humboldt County Superior Court Judge Dale Reinholtsen ruled prosecutors had failed to present enough evidence to hold Zoellner to stand trial on a murder charge. "But with the state of the evidence as it was, and our kid being in custody, we decided to do it. And, I'll add that both Kelly and I believed Kyle didn't do this."

Within hours of Brownfield's comments to the Journal, his client had been released from jail and protesters were beginning to descend on the Arcata Plaza. The case has been racially charged from the beginning, as Zoellner is white and Lawson is black, and some at the party have alleged race was a motivating factor in the physical altercations that preceded the stabbing that morning.

Below, we take a brief look at the state's case against Zoellner, why it failed to get past a judge and what's next.

Insufficient Evidence

Reinholtsen offered a lengthy explanation of his ruling and the deficiencies in prosecutors' case, saying there wasn't a single witness that put a knife in Zoellner's hands that night, much less one who claimed to have seen the fatal stabbing. There was also no physical evidence connecting Zoellner to the 10-inch kitchen knife found at the crime scene or the killing, Reinholtsen said.

The five-day preliminary hearing saw 17 witnesses take the stand, with many offering inconsistent testimony that conflicted with that of other witnesses. The discrepancies ranged from insignificant to substantial, but were fairly constant. Depending on who was testifying, the house party that began April 14 and stretched into the early-morning hours the following day was attended by anywhere from 15 to 300 people, with the fatal confrontation occurring anywhere between 1 and 3 a.m.

Testimony was just as inconsistent when it came to what happened after Zoellner arrived at the party around 2:30 a.m. as the designated driver to pick up his girlfriend — Lila Ortega — and her three friends, who'd been partying there for hours. Ortega had lost her new cell phone and she, her friends and Zoellner approached the house to find it. As they approached, four people came out of the house — Lawson, his girlfriend Ren Bobodilla, and two brothers, Kyle and Kristoff Castillo — and Zoellner asked them, politely by all accounts, if any of them had seen Ortega's phone.

The consistencies in testimony end there. According to Ortega, the group took offense and one of the men punched her in the face. According to the Castillo brothers, Ortega accused them of stealing the phone at which point she and Bobodilla wound up entangled in a fight. According to Bobodilla, Ortega attacked her by biting her breast. Depending on who was testifying, this first altercation either left Zoellner knocked unconscious or relatively unscathed and looking for his car keys.

When it comes to the stabbing itself, nobody claimed to have seen it. One of Lawson's friends, Paris Wright, testified that he saw Lawson holding Zoellner in a headlock on the ground and separated them to find Lawson bleeding from stab wounds to his abdomen. But this is in conflict with another witness — Casey Gleaten — who said Zoellner was being beaten unconscious by a group of men when sometime later, she saw Lawson collapse some distance away from the defendant. (One witness testified that from a distance he saw someone fitting Zoellner's description make two stabbing motions at Lawson abdomen and another testified he saw something reflective in Zoellner's hand around the time of the stabbing, but testimony from both conflicted in substantial ways with other testimony and evidence.)

Like the testimony, there was little — if any — physical evidence to tie Zoellner to the crime. There was a fingerprint and a fabric fiber found on the knife, but the print wasn't Zoellner's and the fiber didn't match samples taken from his sweatshirt. The knife itself wasn't part of a set Zoellner apparently may have had in his car and uses in his job as a chef for a local catering company, and his boss testified that he'd never seen Zoellner with it at work.

No other physical evidence was presented at the preliminary hearing.

What now?

The case isn't over — not by a long shot. There is nothing to prevent prosecutors from again charging Zoellner with murder, or pursuing charges against anyone else.

Arcata Police Chief Tom Chapman has reached out to the FBI and the California Department of Justice to tap additional resources for the investigation, which continues to be led by APD with support from the district attorney's office. But it seems likely this case will ultimately hinge on forensic evidence, and that may be a slow process.

Chapman said the Department of Justice lab is conducting a variety of tests on Zoellner's clothing and the knife. The clothes — shoes, sweatpants and a sweatshirt — have blood stains that are undergoing DNA analysis in an effort to determine if any of the blood on Zoellner belonged to Lawson. The knife, meanwhile, is being tested for additional fibers, latent fingerprints and the presence of blood. It will likely be at least a month — and potentially months — before APD gets these results.

APD is also working to find out who the one visible fingerprint on that 10-inch kitchen knife belongs to, which would seem to mean needing to fingerprint partygoers. "That is obviously a question that needs to be answered," Chapman said, adding that the investigation remains very much active and ongoing. "This investigation doesn't end until we run out of evidence, leads and witnesses. ... I fully anticipate that at the end of our investigation charges will be filed and we will have a court process."

For his part, Brownfield struck a somber note when asked about his reaction to Reinholtsen's May 5 ruling.

"I'm happy for Kyle and his family, but it's hard to be happy when there's a young kid — who, from everything I know about him, seems to be a really good kid — dead and now we're left with more questions than answers," he said. "There's a big piece in a lot of people's lives that's definitely missing."

How someone can be racist and not know it

By Maxwell Schnurer

newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

Many painful questions will be asked after the killing of black Humboldt State University student leader David Josiah Lawson. Was the killing motivated by racism? Were the responses of first responders biased? Do people of color experience differential treatment in this often-described liberal community?

These are essential questions to ask and we must respond with sincere soul-searching and vigorous public dialogue. The worst response would be to shut down the discussion by insisting that race played no part.

Is it possible that someone can be racist and not know it?

Absolutely.

Racism is not always explicit like Ku Klux Klan terror. Racism comes in the form of slurs or jokes that suggest a person is a second-class citizen or unwelcome. But it is more often encountered as different treatment at a bank window or a hospital waiting room. Much of racism is systematic and institutional.

Think of white supremacy as racial team whose members have each other's backs. In job interviews or while grading papers, white supremacy would encourage white people to help out one group while disadvantaging everyone else.

Could someone act like a white supremacist and not even perceive it? Absolutely. Consider baseball umpires.

Professional home-plate umpires for Major League Baseball have to determine if pitches are strikes or balls with split second decision-making. Does race ever play into these high-speed decisions? Absolutely.

In These Times, a nonprofit magazine, explored this question examining racism and baseball pitchers. Its reporting cited Southern Methodist University a study that analyzed 3.5 million Major League Baseball pitches as measured by the QuesTec digital pitch monitoring system. The researchers found that home plate umpires called "disproportionately more strikes for pitchers of their same ethnic group."

More significantly, since the vast majority of Major League Baseball umpires are white, their subtle prejudice benefits white pitchers and disadvantages pitchers of color. White pitchers with a white umpire can throw balls that get counted as strikes and black pitchers with white umpires have to tighten up their strike zone, making their pitches easier to hit.

In these split second decisions, the study found that race plays a significant factor. Note that these are trained professionals whose decisions are being videotaped, scrutinized by fans and they still noticeably discriminate. The race of umpire and pitcher demonstrably changes the outcomes of baseball games.

So it is possible to be racist without intending it. It is possible to harm people with racism and not be explicit about it. Your friends might be the most generous people you can imagine and, yet, they may still act biased in favor of people who look like them.

The umpires are a good example of how racism can be understood as systematic. From Little League up to major leagues, you can't play baseball without an umpire. Every baseball player of color will encounter system-wide discrimination from the people who are the arbiters of fairness in the game.

Racist ideas might influence how we understand the world. If a person holds (perhaps unwittingly) prejudice against people of color, then that will shape how they see politics, threats and culture. To refuse to acknowledge this possibility covers up for this kind of harm. It discourages racists from self-reflection and insulates people who discriminate from accountability.

Researcher Carrie B. Fried created a study asking passersby to analyze the lyrics from a violent folk song, the Kingston Trio's "Bad Man's Blunder." Participants were told that the lyrics were either from a country song or a rap song.

When people were told the song was from a hip hop band the song was rated as more violent than when people were told that the same lyrics were from a country band. Simply changing the genre label of a song created a significantly more negative review even when the lyrics were identical.

The researcher notes that one possible reason for this difference is because rap music is widely associated with black people. Fried argues in her study that racial stereotypes are influential and largely un-observed.

It is inaccurate to claim that someone "doesn't have a racist bone in their body" or "couldn't be racist." But more importantly, this kind of communication says that you won't even entertain the possibility that someone might have experienced racism.

Suggesting that an incident couldn't have been motivated by racism is gas-lighting people of color. Telling people of color that they didn't experience or didn't understand discrimination is paternalistic avoidance. This is why Arcata and Humboldt County have the dual reputation as both progressive and racist.

The people of Humboldt County have long assumed that their general friendliness and progressive politics mean that they cannot be racist. But people experience discrimination in this place and avoidance isn't helping.

Fighting discrimination and standing up for equality will take diligent work. To embody the kind of welcoming community that we proclaim, it is going to be necessary to do serious rethinking. Here are some initial suggestions:

Listen to the voices and experiences of people of color: It is possible that white people don't perceive discrimination. In order to see how racism works, we would need to acknowledge that people discriminate and listen to those who experience that discrimination.

Stop exclaiming that you know someone isn't racist: Learn to explain how this argument silences when it comes up among friends and peers.

Get used to uncomfortable conversations: People who have power and privilege on the North Coast are going to have to challenge stereotypes, jokes and racist anecdotes in all the spaces we inhabit. This includes all-white spaces, meaning that some well-meaning white people are going to have to break down what is problematic about racism in bars and apartments in Arcata.

The study of baseball pitches found that when umpires knew they were being watched (during a prominent game) their racial biases decreased. Knowing that other people are paying attention can subtly discourage discrimination.

Courageous people can make a difference here. The first step is simply refusing to silence the conversations about racism. After that, we can become better listeners and develop the capacity to challenge discrimination. But none of that is possible if we continue to deny that racism exists or proclaim that people we know and love can't be racist. ●

Change of Venue Request in Nursing Home Death Case

Shlomo Rechnitz can't get a fair trial in Humboldt County. That's the contention of the law firm representing the skilled nursing magnate, Lewis Brisbois, Bisgaard & Smith LLP, which recently filed a motion for a change of venue in one of the three wrongful death and elder abuse suits filed against Rechnitz and his company, Brius Healthcare Management.

The case revolves around Ralph Sorensen, a patient at Seaview Rehabilitation and Wellness Center who died Jan. 27, 2016, after complications related to an infected pressure ulcer. In the complaint, local law firm Janssen Malloy LLP alleges that Sorensen's death is correlated to low staffing levels at the facility and accuses Seaview, Rechnitz, Brius and the administrative services company Rockport of wrongful death related to elder abuse and neglect.

The motion filed by Rechnitz's attorneys, which will be heard on May 25, says, "there is a reason to believe that an impartial trial in Humboldt cannot be had." As evidence for this claim, the motion cites a 2011 meeting between Rechnitz and then-District Attorney Paul Gallegos in which Gallegos reportedly "threatened to jail someone if understaffing continued to occur at the facilities."

Also cited are several articles that appeared in the Lost Coast Outpost and the comments made by readers. In his individual declaration, Rechnitz affirms that he has "received several threats of physical harm ... presumably as a result of these negative news articles."

Articles in the North Coast Journal are also quoted several times, including our April 2016 article "Naming and Blaming," which is described as accusing "Defendant Rechnitz of corporate manipulation to avoid liability."

That and "numerous other articles attacking" the defendants are cited as reasons why there is, according to Rechnitz's attorneys, "a strong likelihood Defendants would not receive an impartial trial in Humboldt County."

Rechnitz's attorneys also cite the difficulty of traveling to Humboldt County and finding appropriate lodging for Tamar Rechnitz, wife of Shlomo Rechnitz, who holds a share in the company, and who would also be expected to find child care for the couple's 9-year-old son. According to the motion, the travel and lodging expenses would be prohibitive to Tamar Rechnitz, justifying a change of venue to Los Angeles County, where the Rechnitz family lives. The declarations cite the cost of travel as between $700-$1,000.

The motion does not reference a $3.6 million private jet purchased by Rechnitz in 2013 through one of his companies. According to flight data compiled by the Federal Aviation Administration (and made public by the National Union of Health-

Puff, Puff, Savings?

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

If Congress really wants to reduce Medicaid costs, there could be a pretty simple solution: Legalize marijuana.

A new study out of the University of Georgia investigating the association between medical marijuana laws and prescription drug spending in Medicaid programs in all 50 states and the District of Columbia found that the 28 states that allow medical marijuana use saw a substantial reduction in the number of prescriptions given to program enrollees. The study estimates medical-marijuana friendly states saved $475 million in prescription drug costs in 2014, and estimates national savings would have eclipsed $1 billion that year if medical cannabis were legalized across the country.

“Our findings that actual prescription drug use in Medicaid varies in ways consistent with marijuana’s being a substitute product provides additional, albeit indirect, evidence of medical use,” the researchers wrote. “In times of significant budget pressure, the possible savings of $1.01 billion nationally in spending on prescription fee-for service Medicaid is significant.”

For the record, the country spends about $400 billion annually on Medicaid but, hey, $1 billion in savings is still $1 billion in savings, right? Last Chance Grade, anyone?

Medicaid — the nation’s popular health care program for the poor — has long been a political sticking point. It was widely expanded under the Affordable Care Act, drawing the ire of some Republicans who view it as an entitlement program growing out of control and are now looking to drastically restructure it under the American Health Care Act that just passed the House.

The University of Georgia study is groundbreaking because it adds to a growing — if anecdotal — body of evidence that patients are substituting medical cannabis for other pharmaceuticals in states where it’s legal and actually ties that to cost savings for taxpayers.

Specifically, the research found a 13 percent reduction in drugs used to treat depression, a 17 percent reduction for nausea drugs, 12 percent for those used to treat psychosis and seizure disorders and an 11 percent drop in pain meds.

The study comes after a review by the Drug and Alcohol Dependence journal looked at 17 years of hospital discharge records from 27 states and found hospitalizations for complications from opioid use abuse and dependence were about 23 percent lower in states with legal access to medical marijuana. Researchers also found that pot-friendly states recorded 13 percent fewer opioid overdoses.

Meanwhile, in the Oval Office, President Donald J. Trump signed his first piece of major legislation on May 5 and fired a cryptic shot across the bow of the medical cannabis industry in the process.

Trump has sent decidedly mixed messages on the subject of medical cannabis. On the campaign trail he spoke in almost glowing terms about its virtues, but after being elected he promptly appointed an attorney general who famously said “good people don’t smoke marijuana” and recently said weed is a “life-wrecking dependency” only “slightly less awful” than heroin. But last week came Trump’s first litmus test on the subject in the form of a $1 trillion spending bill, which contained a provision prohibiting the Justice Department from using any of its funding to block or interfere with state medical marijuana laws.

“I will treat this provision consistently with my constitutional responsibility to take care that the laws be faithfully executed,” Trump wrote in his signing statement.

It’s hard to know what to make of Trump’s statement, though the same could be said of much of what he’s written and said in the 100-plus days since taking office. Some fear it’s an indication that he plans to give Attorney General Jeff Sessions the green light to ignore the Congressional funding ban, while others seem to think it’s just a bit of bluster from a man intent on ensuring his authority isn’t questioned.

In any event, there goes the clarity the industry celebrated with the spending bill’s passage last week. ●

Elizabeth Hedlund and Brad Harrington as fairy-tale father and daughter Maurice and Belle.

Beauty and the Beast has evolved into some sort of larger-than-life thing of its own in the past quarter century. It really owes all this to Disney's 1991 animated film, the gigantic success of which helped jump-start the company's nearly dormant animated movie division. Under the laws of nature, there was no reason to stop there and a live-action musical adaptation made its debut on Broadway less than three years hence.

On Broadway, the play ran for 13 years straight and has since been reborn as the live-action movie version released just months ago. But the play — to which long-time Andrew Lloyd Webber collaborator Tim Rice lent a hand, penning additional songs — stands as a thing unto itself. And Ferndale Repertory Theatre, in a production impressively directed by Christopher Kehoe (FRT's Little Women), does a fine job with the story.

It'd be hard to imagine anyone around not familiar with the archetypal storyline based on the 18th century fable by Gabrielle-Suzanne Barbot de Villeneuve, which was itself rewritten and passed on through the ensuing years, with film adaptations here and there in the 20th century. The success of any staging of Beauty and the Beast hinges on finding a good Belle, which is no problem here. Elizabeth Hedlund, a relative newcomer as a lead around here, has an absolutely stunning voice and hits the necessary high notes magnificently, in addition to being an overall buoyant presence.

The play's opening number "Belle" is so rousing as to be a showstopper right off the bat and that could present a bit of a challenge. But it's a grand bit of exposition and flash, one ably brought to life by the show's large cast of dancers and chorus singers. This introduces us to gasbag Gaston (Gary Bowman), his bumbling sidekick LeFou (Ian Gamboa) and shortly thereafter Belle's inventor father, Maurice (Brad Harrington), whose getting lost in the woods leads to meeting the Beast (a very good Jason Chand), a former handsome prince cursed forever to live out a lonely existence in his castle.

The theatrical version, as it was conceived in 1994, has eight additional songs by Rice and composer Alan Menken not present in the film, and after the opening of "Belle" the play loses steam as it moves through plot machinations and unremarkable songs that don't enliven the action. This doesn't really break until "Gaston," a classic comic-relief number late in the first act that again makes use of finely tuned choreography by Alexandra Blouin, topping even her most recent work on The Rocky Horror Picture Show last fall.

Even "Be Our Guest," in so many ways a Ziegfeld Follies-type marvel, can at times seem a bit busy and overly packed-in with participants and elements. So much of the story's middle shifts between the comic antics of the transformed-by-the curse characters and the story of Belle and the Beast, and doesn't always mesh well. But the structure does give Lumiere (Andre LaRocque), Cogsworth (Tyler Egerer), Mrs. Potts (Tina Toomata) and others opportunities for their own turns, and mostly the cast hits them well.

Beauty and the Beast has production values of which FRT should be quite proud. The costumes by Maryanne Scozzari (particularly Belle's signature yellow dress) are eye-poppingly great all around, and small touches like the rose petals that gently flutter down onstage at two points are beautiful. Then there's the comic effect of a Siri joke that I'll reveal no more about here.

Tackling something that looms iconic dating back centuries and that has recently been a blockbuster can't be easy. And despite its flaws, FRT's Beauty and the Beast escapes the fairy tale's perils.

Ferndale Repertory Theatre's production of Beauty and the Beast plays on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through June 3, with Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. through June 4. For more information, call 786-5483 or visit www.ferndalerep.org.

Deep Dish Diplomacy

Hey, Australia. Are we good? We had a weird phone call followed by a weird meeting and now it's awkward. But look, we made your favorite: meat pies! For those unfamiliar, meat pies are the wings and nachos of the land down under. They are at once a comfort food and the portable meal that launched a thousand hooligans.

Unlike when restaurants whip up Asian salads and iffy Cinco de Mayo taco bowls, an actual Australian consulted on the recipe for Slice of Humboldt Pie's (828 I St., Arcata) Australian meat pies ($3.50 empanada, $7 individual pie, $28 family size). Blending in among the hot case of empanadas and pot pies, the antipodean favorites are stuffed with saucy ground Humboldt grassfed beef, minced onion and peppers. The flavor is ketchup-y in a good way, reminiscent of the sweet tomato sauce of a sloppy Joe. And unlike that quintessentially American sandwich — the engineering flaws of which are proclaimed in its very name — the filling is tidily contained in Slice of Humboldt's irreproachably buttery, flaky crust.

One can easily imagine it as a late-night drinking snack, a morning hangover helper or something to tuck into when you're jet lagged after a 22-hour flight. Cheers, mates.

Pressed for Cuban Sandwiches

The plot twists and sudden shifts of international politics have never come at us with such breakneck speed. Sure, you can hop a flight to Cuba now but who knows in a month or two? Stockpiling Cohibas in your bunker humidior now might not be a bad idea. And you'll need a local back-up supplier for Cuban sandwiches in case the travel ban kicks in again because going through Canada is just going to make you feel bad (we see your shade, Trudeau) and Florida just looks overwhelming.

No regime — not even Castro's — lasts forever. Indeed, Bar Fly is no more and The Vista Del Mar has risen in its spot (91 Commercial St., Eureka). New management has made over the institutionally seedy back room, added to the menu and kept the place's deep fryer game strong. The Cubano sandwich ($12) at this bar of the people comes on a fittingly proletariat aluminum tray. Sliced roast pork butt, ham, Swiss cheese, mustard and pickle are all panini pressed on a home-made roll. This version skips the contentious salami and the bread is not technically Cuban but, like all good Cuban sandwiches, it is a savory combination of tart and meaty flavors — like the combination of a picnic and a Sunday dinner. Chase it with a Cuba Libre and toast.

Back to the Shack

Surfside Burger Shack (445 Fifth St., Eureka) looks more or less the same — like a colorful, well-used surfboard with a few dings in it. Walking in off the street, you might not guess it's under new ownership. After a deep inhale, you might just think the place is back on its game after a year or so in decline.

The new owners have stepped up Surfside's grassfed beef game with fresh rather than frozen meat but stuck to the basics of the shop. The Southwestern Swell ($8.95) comes with the usual avocado, lettuce, tomato, onion and mayo, along with a controlled burn of pepper jack cheese melted over grilled pickled jalapeño slices. Before you freak out because you can't see any avocado, attempt some surfer chill and look under the patty for a mashed schmear — the only reasonable solution to the dilemma of sliding slices. The heat is mellow enough that you can return to work without changing your shirt. For $2, add a split serving of slightly dark hand-cut fries and onion rings, which are as much of a draw as the burger. Fresh fries with skins on, after all, taste not just like fries, but potatoes rendered crisp. The hand-dipped onion rings are puffy, crunchy life preservers, just as you would hope. It's no wonder — look upon the serious fellow at the fryer, dropping in one heavy circle at a time and not looking away for a moment. You have our admiration, sir.

And finally, in a world gone mad, reason has prevailed in this one corner: There are at last milkshakes ($5), tall and thick enough to demand a little work for that first sip. Get thee behind me, secret Starbuck's menu of ridiculous frozen concoctions. I will have a milkshake. In chocolate, vanilla or strawberry.

Sculling

Magic on the water

By Simona Carini

getout@northcoastjournal.com

At the Humboldt Bay Rowing Association (HBRA) sculling boathouse at the Adorni Center, my sculling buddy and I lose no time getting on the water, each one in a single boat. Once we push off the dock, memories of the pre-dawn rise, the drive, the maneuvering of boats and oars down to the water fade fast — a mere prelude to the luxury of an hour of rowing.

The boats moored at Woodley Island Marina blink in the early light and the slumbering Carson Mansion towers just east of us. We own the place: nobody moves around on the boats, on the docks, on the boardwalk.

We head north toward the Samoa Bridge. Soon our pilot harbor seal surfaces to say, “Hi.” I like to think that she is always the same seal, that she knows us and is excited to join our ride. Because join she does and at regular intervals she pops her head out of the water to let us know she’s accompanying us, then dives back down drawing a question mark in the water: Where next?

We reach the end of Daby Island and after turning the boats around we pause to take in the expanse of the bay. Birds of various species, intent on getting breakfast, drop a distracted look on us. Having won its daily tussle with the fog, the sun asserts its right to chase away shadows. It makes grass glisten, water sparkle and sunglasses necessary.

We row all the way to the south end of the marina, across toward Indian Island and down around the middle span of the Samoa Bridge, past which we turn around. The rhythmic dipping of our oars in the water breaks the prevailing silence.

Rowing engages every large muscle group in the body. Most of the stroke’s power comes from the legs’ push. The back and arms wrap up the stroke then start the recovery part, in which the body moves forward and gets ready for the next stroke. Rowing for me is like swimming the butterfly on my back: The oars are my arms, their blades my hands. When I let the blades fall in the water, they dip deep enough on their own. With the drive, I propel myself on the water and I feel the boat glide. I see the wake I leave behind, a long stroke as if painted by a Japanese calligraphy brush.

Repeating the same sequence of movements becomes a dance. When I swim, I go on autopilot. When I row, I must concentrate on every stroke, so my mind empties itself of what is not strictly necessary to execute the task at hand.

Docking is like yoga's savasana, the final pose, when I let everything go and there is a rush of profound well-being soaking every cell. Sculling requires a bit more than rolling up my mat when it's over, but the unexciting steps of carrying the boats up from the dock to the boathouse, washing them and putting them away are like pennies in exchange for the precious time spent out on the water with seals, pelicans, egrets and all the birds that love Humboldt Bay as much as we do. ●

Want to try it?

The Humboldt Bay Rowing Association (HBRA) provides rowing instruction to individuals of all ages. HBRA hosts both junior and master competitive teams, as well as recreational rowing on an independent level with their recreational sculling program.

For information on private lessons, the upcoming Summer Rowing Clinics for juniors and adult rowers, how to become certified as an "independent rower" or to join one of the club teams, visit www.hbra.org.

If you want to give rowing a try first, take advantage of the National Learn to Row Day on Saturday June 3. Ages 11 and up can sign up to get a taste of being out on the water with other people practicing sweep rowing. For more information, visit www.eventbrite.com/e/national-learn-to-row-day-registration-32592881185.

HBRA operates out of two boat-houses: the sculling boathouse is located at the Adorni Center next to the HSU Aquatic Center. The sweep program is located at the HSU/HBRA Boathouse up the road from the Adorni Center on Waterfront Drive, just south of the Samoa Bridge.

For other perspectives, see Amy Barnes' previous North Coast Journal's article on sweep rowing ("Oars on the Water," May 28, 2015) and a recent Washington Post article on sculling and age (wapo.st/2pfemRG).

HUMBOLDT BAY TRAIL: THE 'FINAL FOUR'

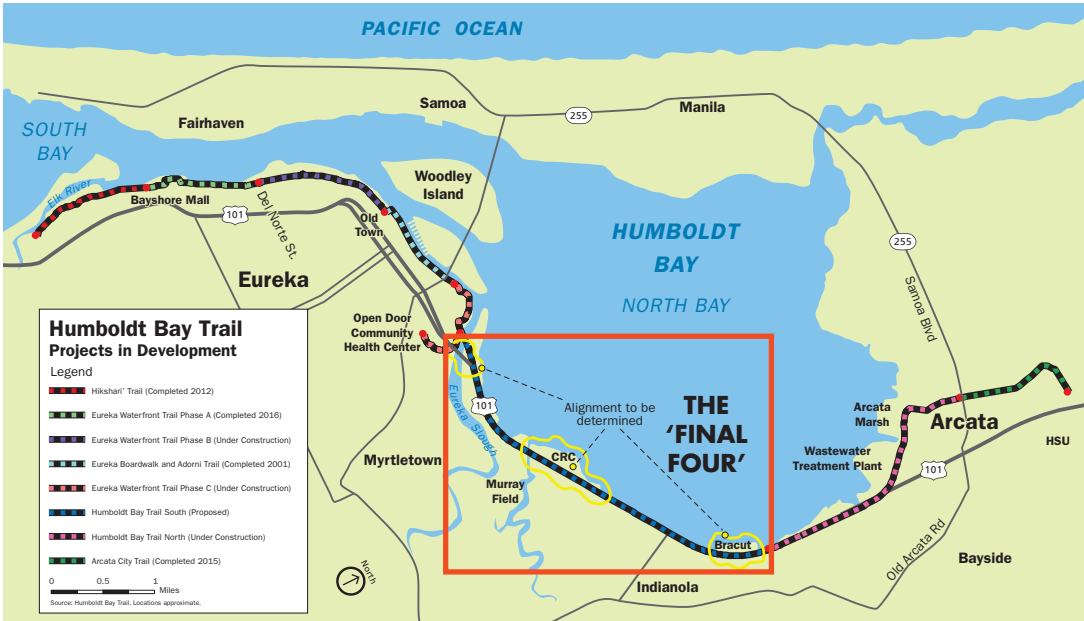

The 13-mile Humboldt Bay Trail from south Eureka through Arcata is close to a reality. Construction is complete or underway on all but for the final four miles of trail – from Target to the Bracut Industrial Park.

Design-engineering for the final four miles, a section called the Bay Trail South, is underway. State and federal funds will be sought for construction as well, but trail maintenance and emergency repair will fall to the county and cities.

To help secure public construction funds for the Bay Trail South, we need to demonstrate the community's willingness to accept responsibility for long-term maintenance for this section and all county trails.

Therefore, the Humboldt Bay Trail Fund has been established with the Humboldt Area Foundation to receive donations from the community with these priorities: trail maintenance and support of volunteer initiatives; emergency repairs; trail amenities; cost-share for state and federal funds.

Farm to Table

We're the other California. Past San Francisco, nestled between redwoods, craggy coasts, and verdant hills. An adventure to find, and an experience to remember, we're all about artisanal products and relaxed culture. This is Humboldt County, home of hundreds of specialty food and beverage producers. From fair trade coffee roasters to bean to bar chocolatiers, organic ghee to gluten-free breads and pies, farm to loaf bakeries to grain to glass distilleries. You name it, Humboldt makes it. You can walk down the aisle of any of our many locally owned grocery stores and easily select a "Humboldt Made" item in virtually every category. 90% plus percent of your diet could be Humboldt Made if you so desired. How incredible is that?

Perhaps it's our stunning scenery or laid back lifestyle that has led to Humboldt County having more entrepreneurs per capita than any other county in the state. Whatever it is, it's working. Our local food economy is thriving.

Time (and) Travel

Way back at the Blue Lake Museum

By Gabrielle Gopinath

artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

It's May and the Blue Lake Museum just reopened for the season — two good reasons to head inland, toward the sun. A copywriter working for the now-defunct Hotel Korbel, close to downtown Blue Lake, puffed the excursion in the 1920s: "Ho! For Korbel in the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers. While in Humboldt, don't fail to visit Hotel Korbel — fine automobile drive from Eureka." Hotel Korbel has no more vacancies but the rest of the description still applies. The drive is fine, especially this time of year. Hitch up the buggy and pump those tires.

As the Blue Lake Museum opens for its 2017 summer season the museum's curator, Cynthia Gourley-Bagwell, and her team of dedicated volunteers continue working to catalog a wealth of diverse historical materials and make them accessible to the public. The museum's exhibition spaces are historic in their own right — the institution occupies the old Blue Lake train depot, a wedge-shaped building straddling the platform between what used to be the Arcata and Mad River Railroad track's two forks. The building's front rooms continue to feel like rooms in the country station they once were (the area has had no passenger rail service since 1931 and no service at all since 1985).

Railroad ephemera, logging memorabilia and turn-of-the-century residents' portrait photographs occupy the former depot's public rooms. Rooms in back feature spaces organized around domestic, railroad, farming and logging themes that flow into one another without interruption.

The notional parlor assembles pieces of heavy wood furniture into a configuration suggesting the Biedermeier comforts of a middle-class home circa 1890. The sheet music resting on the upright piano is a popular tune titled "I Love You Truly," dedicated modestly "to A.B.H." An armchair wearing an antimacassar has a black ribbon pinned across it to keep visitors from trying to sit down. But the side table next to it supports reading glasses, a book, a teacup and a ball of grey yarn, as if to suggest that the absent sitter/knitter/reader has just stepped out.

Some historical museums take an exhaustive approach to scholarship, seeking to annotate the provenance of every wilted doily. But the artifacts in the Blue Lake Museum are presented with minimal comment, which means they communicate largely through form.

The intimate exhibition space juxtaposes artifacts in ways that can be engagingly disruptive. A delicate woven Hupa cap can be seen only steps away from the 3,000-pound letterpress used to print the Blue Lake Advocate in the 1890s. (The museum preserves a complete run of the Advocate in print and microfilm among its major holdings.)

Here teachers' and butchers' tools rest side by side, as they must have at times in daily life during the hardscrabble heyday of this logging town. Gold Metal crayons and old editions of McGuffey's Eclectic Spelling Book repose cheek-by-jowl with a stained and studded pair of leather gauntlets "worn for slaughtering."

A few books are on display, among them an enormously embossed and gold-stamped Self-Interpreting Bible, published in 1878 by one enterprising New Yorker, John Brown, which someone really should read cover-to-cover some time; the titular claim would raise some interesting theological questions, if true.

Here is a sequence of longhand homestead deeds and land grants. As they rest there in their dimly lit vitrines, the sight of them might make you imagine the way a Hupa or Karuk might have felt when a white settler first communicated the idea this piece of paper says I own this land; the initial reaction might well have been to scoff — yeah, right — given how extreme the disconnect between the referent (the deed) and the thing (the land itself) would have been.

Here is a Studebaker "doctor's buggy," which seems to have been a practical yet stylish choice capable of handling some rough terrain: big wheels, high clearance, a wide protective awning and all-weather celluloid upholstery in a shiny black pattern with tiny gold stars made it, arguably, the horse-drawn Tacoma of the 19-teens. The lovingly restored carriage looks as though it could drive away today, although perhaps the Elvira-like mannequin representing the carriage driver, with a Goth mane of wild black hair sticking out around the collar of her floor-length black theatre coat, hasn't aged quite as well.

Here is a playbill for a silent comedy that played at the Korbel Theater in 1917: Jack Pickford and Louise Huff starring in the movie adaptation of novelist Owen Johnson's story The Varmint, directed by William D. Taylor, released by Paramount.

This movie is now lost, with no known existing prints. But the playbill offers a tantalizing glimpse of a cinematic experience now permanently beyond our reach.

Tropicalismo

By Andy Powell

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

It's never easy nail down a music genre. As with many things ineffable, the more you describe them, the more elusive they seem. Much like quantum physics, the more microscopic your view, the more you see, ad infinitum. This paradoxical quandary hit me while trying to pin what it was about Sugar Candy Mountain that made it so easy for me to imagine Don Draper sipping on some rum poolside with Los Angeles fading in and into the polyester sunshine. With light and airy grooves, many of the songs from the band's album 666 have slightly darker currents that could have provided the soundtrack while Benjamin Braddock was awaiting Mrs. Robinson in the Taft Hotel lounge. With jangly guitar and mellow vibe licks, the well-polished tunes hint at some beauty hidden right below the slick surface of some cheap stucco on some beachside L.A. shithole. The song "Windows" touches on the SoCal sound while also pulling some grooves from the Rio waves via Pan Am first class. The simple and precise drumming along with the tight no-frills bass playing support the enveloping keys and vibes and give room to the reverb soaked vocals which allows you to melt into your deck chair and not worry who's buying your wife a drink at the pool bar. Catch the Tropicalia-influenced SoCal rock of Sugar Candy Mountain next week (more info below).

Thursday

Marin County's The Beer Scouts are fans of rock n' roll and, not-surprisingly, fans of good beer as well. It will also be of no surprise that they're returning to Humboldt after their last shows here a few months ago. Apparently, our beer is so good up here — which we all know — these fellas are in town all weekend. Check 'em out tonight at the Mad River Brewery Tap Room at 6 p.m. for free. They have local connections and used to rock up here in the local music scene a few decades ago. I'm sure they're getting hooked up with some free beer but if their glasses look dry, help 'em out. Although they've graced the stage at Carnegie Hall, The Friction Quartet (out of the Bay Area, I think) will be performing Mozart's Prussian Quartets along with others here in the (less stuffy) redwoods at the Westhaven

Center for the Arts at 7 p.m. Catch this class act for a $5-$20 sliding scale. If you missed Zeparella the last time they were in town a few months back, tonight's your night to repent. The Bay Area Led Zeppelin tribute band seems to love stopping by Humboldt when they're on the road blasting out the Zep hits. I've been listening to a lot of Coda lately and while I wouldn't argue that it's Led's best album (nor would they, I imagine), I'll keep my fingers crossed for a rare performance of "Wearing and Tearing." I've seen this band a few times, and have never been disappointed. Show starts at 9:30 p.m. and will run you $20 at the Humboldt Brews doors.

Friday

The Detours (formerly The Honky Tonk Detours) return to the Mad River Brewery Tap Room this evening at 6 p.m. for a free show. Two hours later, and equally free, you'll find Good Company at Cafe Mokka playing their take on Celtic tunes for an all ages show. Still scouting out delicious beer here on the North Coast, The Beer Scouts are rockin' at Six Rivers Brewery in McKinleyville around 9 p.m. for free. Blues and R&B are on the bill tonight at the Logger Bar in Blue Lake around the same time courtesy of The Lost Dogs. Remember, if you're at a free show, you can still show the band your appreciation (rubs fingers together stage left).

Saturday

Some Home Cookin' is on the menu tonight up at the Mad River Brewery Tap Room at 6 p.m. Joyce, Fred, Tim and Gary will get you moving while you dance the evening away in the waning Blue Lake sunshine (weather permitting). It's a free show, so have a blast. The Eureka Brass Band closes up the Fortuna Concert Series tonight at the Fortuna Monday Club at 7:30 p.m. Catch some Latin jazz, swing jazz and some more modern tunes as well tonight for only $10. Supremely talented local band Scuber Mountain is celebrating the release of their second album, Finally, A Band You Can Trust! at the Arcata Playhouse tonight at 8 p.m. With origins in Lawrence, Kansas, circa 2003, piano-pop Scuber made its way out to Humboldt via Aber Miller (keys) and eventually Kym Scafe (vocals) arrived in Humboldt to form the core of the band with Humboldtians Drew Mohr (bass) and John Daren Thomas (drums). Drew and John would at some point flee Humboldt (damn you, Seattle and damn you, Los Angeles), but have been tempted back up tonight to join original Kansas Scuber Braden Young (guitar) for tonight's release. While out on the road recently hawking their wares, Scuber shared a stage with Montana's Pale People and hit it off with these fellow satirical poppers. Lo and behold, these people from Montana are coming all the way out to open up this album release show! So with that bit of history behind us, go support what could be the last local show from Scuber Mountain. Just $15 will get you in the door and will get you a copy of their latest release. Missed The Beer Scouts the past two nights? They're on at another brewery tonight, this time at Redwood Curtain Brewery in Arcata at 8:30 p.m. and for free.

Sunday

In case you didn't party hard enough last night and are up early this morning, head to the Arcata Community Center to hear the 60-singer-strong Arcata Interfaith Gospel Choir doing its thing. AIGC is joined by the AIGC Youth Choir and A Company of Voices around 10 a.m. Tickets are $18 at the door but kids under 5 get in for free. It's the 15th annual Spring Fling Fundraiser at the Westhaven Center for the Arts at 1 p.m. with barbecue, a raffle, a hula-hoop contest and the Compost Mountain Boys (not necessarily in that order). I hear this one's a free event.

Tuesday

I'm told there's some "cutting edge music" in the Scottish tradition happening tonight as a part of the Crib Concert Series at 7 p.m. in Arcata. Now I'm not hip enough to know where these exclusive house concerts take place but if you're interested, email crib1251@gmail.com for more information. I haven't mentioned who's playing tonight, have I? Well, American-born singer and piper Elias Alexander can bring many different genres — such as rock, blues and funk — into the Scottish sound. He's touring the West Coast with The Bywater Band and they'll be starting around 7 p.m. with a sliding scale of $10-$25. Tropicalia rockers Sugar Candy Mountain are bringing their laid-back West Coast sounds to our neck of the coast. Although based out of Oakland, you'd be forgiven for thinking this band was actually cranking out their tunes to Rio to clink caipirinha glasses with Sergio Mendes. They're joined at The Miniplex in Arcata this evening by locals Opossum Sun Trail who sound as if they hail from the dark side Martian high desert plateaus. This 9 p.m. show has an $8 cover.

Andy Powell is a congenital music lover and hosts The Album of the Week Show on KWPT 100.3 FM Tuesdays at 6 p.m. Rum and the Samoa sand may be the closest he gets to Rio.

Swarmy Weather

For the bee curious and those who already love the little buggers, Bee Fest 2017, presented by Humboldt County Beekeepers and E.C.O. Eureka on Saturday, May 13 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Adorni Center (free admission), has it all under one roof: bee lectures, workshops, presentations, information booths, an art show, marketplace, raffle, live music and more. Oh, honey.

This year's theme is Long Live the Queen! And how. We know our pollinators are in trouble. If you want to do something about the plight of the bumblebee, educate yourself on ways to keep them around. Catch the acclaimed documentary Queen of the Sun: What Are the Bees Telling Us? at 3 p.m. after a round of workshops where you can learn how to house and keep healthy future generations of bees. Starting at 11 a.m., check out Getting Started in Beekeeping, Less Toxic Gardening, How to Catch a Swarm, Build a Mason Bee House and the Magic of Mead Making. You can also meet beekeepers from our area hives and taste local honey at the HoneyBee Marketplace, featuring all kinds of bee-related treasures and goodies. And speaking of future generations, see what the kids came up with at the Children's Bee-Inspired Art Show. There's also a cool kids' fun zone, live hive and free flower seeds, so make sure your little ones are in tow so they can bee the change, too.

Call Your Mom

Don't make us come over there and remind you that it's Mother's Day this Sunday, May 14 (we kind of just did). Also, your Mother's Day plans aren't going to make themselves. Better get on that (we'll help you with that, too).

If you need to pick up a last-minute but perfect gift for mom, swing by Humboldt Rose Society's Pre-Mother's Day Plant Sale Saturday, May 13 starting at 9:30 a.m. at 2196 Hemlock St. in Eureka (near Sequoia Park Zoo). In addition to a lovely variety of plants and flowers, an arranger will be on site from 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. to make sure you don't screw up the presentation.

Also on Saturday, May 13, the Mother's Day Tea and Tour is taking place at the beautiful Julia Morgan Redwood Grove from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. ($32, advanced reservations required so call (415) 317-2034.) Enjoy tea and scones with homemade jams and petite sweets with mom while wandering the grounds. Then stop by and peruse the Redwood Grove Boutique.

On Sunday, March 14, Westhaven Center for the Arts celebrates Mother's Day with its annual Spring Fling fundraiser from 1 to 4 p.m. (free admission). Treat mom to an afternoon filled with all her favorites: barbecue and side dishes, desserts, beer, wine, chair massages, a spring-themed raffle with lots of local goods and a silent auction featuring a Hawaiian getaway, jewelry, wine and more. Live music by the Compost Mountain Boys, easel painting, face painting and a Hula Hoop contest round out the fun.

Family Messes

The Dinner and Guardians of the Galaxy

By John J. Bennett

filmland@northcoastjournal.com

Reviews

THE DINNER. Elliptical awkwardness isn't everybody's thing and that's understandable. In real life, it's almost nobody's thing, and those who enjoy it are challenging to be around, to say the least. But cinematically, a sort of rootless discomfiture can go a long way toward establishing tone, serving story and locating characters in context. Such is the case with this little emotional land mine, adapted from Herman Koch's novel and directed by Oren Moverman (Rampart 2011, The Messenger 2009). With oblique camera moves, a constantly shifting soundtrack and jumps in the chronology, The Dinner underscores and amplifies the neurosis and tension at the center of its narrative to distinct, successful and occasionally jarring effect.

As Claire Lohman (Laura Linney) prepares for an evening out, her husband Paul (Steve Coogan) holds forth about how unpleasant he finds the prospect of the dinner they are about to attend. It quickly becomes clear that Paul, in fact, finds the prospect of most things unpleasant, and takes no small satisfaction in holding forth about that fact, verbosely and at great length. Apart from Paul's social awkwardness and pomposity, something is off in the house of Lohman. He sneaks around the house, stealing glances at something on his son Michael's (Charlie Plummer) phone and then trying to conceal his sneaking. His interactions with Michael are charged with a sort of upside-down dominance, the son exploiting the unease and insecurity of the father.

Meanwhile, in a nearby campaign van, a well-dressed couple simmers in their own domestic distress. He, Stan (Richard Gere), a congressman campaigning for governor, makes an 11th-hour effort to gather votes for a bill he has authored. She, Katelyn (Rebecca Hall), can barely look at him. Against the protestations of Stan's campaign manager, they disembark to meet Claire and Paul, Stan's brother, for dinner.

Over an elaborate meal at a ridiculously high-toned restaurant, the couples spend the next two hours or so circling each other, with Stan attempting to wrangle the others into addressing the ever-growing elephant in the room. That elephant, we eventually learn, has to do with something awful Michael and his cousin Rick (Seamus Davey-Fitzpatrick), Stan's son, seem to have gotten away with, despite the knowledge of Rick's more conscientious adopted younger brother Beau (Miles J. Harvey). As the couples continue to dance around the issue at hand, layers of obfuscation gradually become clear: Claire had prior knowledge of the events in question but kept it from Paul, possibly in an effort to protect him emotionally. Stan only made Katelyn aware of the boys' actions just before dinner, and might now derail his campaign to address the issue. In flashback, the lifelong tension, jealousy and anger that define Paul's relationship with his brother become painfully clear, as does his tendency toward stifling depression and lashing out.

The upshot, of course, is that family can be a mess, mostly because people are a mess. The Dinner sets this theme against a kind of familial worst-case scenario, and is perhaps appropriately messy in its execution. There is a section — Paul and Stan visit the site of the Battle of Gettysburg toward the middle of the movie — when that messiness threatens to undermine the otherwise excellent tone and aesthetic of the movie. It's a logical progression: Paul's long-time obsession with the battle coincides with his emotional nadir but the tonal juxtaposition, plus the heavy-handed brother-versus-brother stuff, is a little out of place.

Taken as a whole, though, The Dinner strikes a satisfying balance of psychological realism, narrative risk-taking and unique visual style. The effectiveness of the technique is underpinned by the excellence of the cast, with the four leads each bringing a formidable emotional charge to the proceedings. Coogan stands out here, setting aside his usual acerbic comic genius in a controlled, menacing portrait of frustration and discontent. He, like the movie he top-lines, avoids simple moralization or tidy solutions, presenting instead a potent, complex, authentic yet stylized performance. The Dinner poses a great many questions, leaving many (most?) of them unanswered. It's a risky, raw proposition, carried off stylishly. R. 120M. BROADWAY.

GUARDIANS OF THE GALAXY VOL. 2 offers more of what one would expect and that's not a bad thing. There are gigantic space battles, colorful creatures, sly jokes and middling blue-eyed soul aplenty. The team is back together, ceaselessly ribbing each other while reinforcing the strength of their bond. It's a sequel, in other words, and a good one, made better by its makers' clear and enduring love for the characters.

Not long after the events of Guardians of the Galaxy (2014), Peter Quill (Chris Pratt), Gamora (Zoe Saldana), Drax (Dave Bautista), Rocket (Bradley Cooper) and Baby Groot (Vin Diesel) are back on the job, contracted by a golden-hued uber-race to defend some exotic batteries against a marauding space beast. They complete their task, receiving Gamora's captive fugitive sister Nebula (Karen Gillan) as compensation. They set out for a distant planet to exchange Nebula for a bounty but Rocket's kleptomania runs them afoul of their former employers. This foments a crash landing, a meeting with Peter's long-estranged father Ego (Kurt Russell) and as much plot-business as one can cram in to a two-and-a-half-hour comic book movie.

Over-length may be the only substantial criticism one can levy at Vol. 2, as it delivers and expands on all the promise of the first installment. It is colorful and buoyant and funny and zips along despite the running time. Most importantly, though, it is gentle and humane and heart-felt, feeling like a sort of love-letter from writer-director James Gunn both to the material and its fans. NR. 110M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED
AN EXPLANATION OF THE
NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state will be held by the duly appointed trustee as shown below, of all right, title, and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. Trustor: BARTHOLOMEW LUNN Duly Appointed Trustee: COUNTY RECORDS RESEARCH, INC. Recorded 8/19/2014 as Instrument No. 2014-014614-24 in book , page of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, and pursuant to the Notice of Default and Election to Sell thereunder recorded 1/26/2017 in Book Page , as Instrument No. 2017-001729 of said Official Records. Date of Sale: 5/30/2017 at 11:00 AM Place of Sale:Outside the front entrance to the County Courthouse located at 825 5th Street, Eureka, CA 95501 Estimated amount of unpaid balance and other charges: $62,108.59 Street Address or other common designation of real property: 439 SILVA AVENUE EUREKA, CA 95503 NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 844/477-7869 or visit this Internet Web site www.stoxposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case CR17-1007. Information about postpone-

ments that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. NOTICE INVITING BIDS

1. Notice is hereby given that the Governing Board of the Big Lagoon School District ("District"), of the County of Humboldt, State of California, will receive sealed bids for the Roof Installation Project ("Project") up to, but not later than, 3:00 p.m., on Tuesday, May 30, 2017, and will thereafter publicly open and read aloud the bids. All bids shall be received at the office of the Greenway Partners, located at 1385 8th Street, in Arcata, California 95521.
2. Each bid shall be completed on the Bid Proposal Form included in the Contract Documents, and must conform and be fully responsive to this invitation, the plans and specifications and all other Contract Documents. Copies of the Contract Documents are available for examination at the office of the Big Lagoon School District, County of Humboldt, California, and may be obtained by licensed contractors for free. Electronic copies of the Contract Documents can also be obtained from the Humboldt Builders Exchange (<http://www.humbx.com/>) or by emailing the Project Engineer (Nathan Sanger at sanger@greenwaypartners.net).
3. Each bid shall be accompanied by cash, a cashier's or certified check, or a bidder's bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California as a surety, made payable to the District, in an amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the maximum amount of the bid. The check or bid bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will execute the Contract Documents and will provide the required payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates within ten (10) days after the notification of the award of the Contract.
4. The successful bidder shall comply with the provisions of the Labor Code pertaining to payment of the generally prevailing rate of wages and apprenticeships or other training programs. The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR>. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contractor in excess of one-half of one percent (1/2 of 1%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
8. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
9. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
10. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: C-39 Roofing Contractor's License.
11. (Optional) By approving these bid documents, the Governing Board finds that the Project is substantially complex and unique and therefore requires a retention amount of ___% for the following reasons:.
12. A non-mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Big Lagoon Elementary School on Tuesday, May 16, 2017 at 10:30 a.m. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Project site.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS

1. Notice is hereby given that the Governing Board of the Orick School District ("District"), of the County of Humboldt, State of California, will receive sealed bids for the Supply, Installation and Commissioning of a Grid-Tied, 9.0 kW, Solar PV System Project ("Project") up to, but not later than, 3:00 p.m., on Tuesday, May 30, 2017, and will thereafter publicly open and read aloud the bids. All bids shall be received at the office of the Greenway Partners, located at 1385 8th Street, in Arcata, California 95521.
2. Each bid shall be completed on the Bid Proposal Form included in the Contract Documents, and must conform and be fully responsive to this invitation, the plans and specifications and all other Contract Documents. Copies of the Contract Documents are available for examination at the office of the Orick School District, County of Humboldt, California, and may be obtained by licensed contractors for free. Electronic copies of the Contract Documents can also be obtained from the Humboldt Builders Exchange (<http://www.humbx.com/>) or by emailing the Project Engineer (Nathan Sanger at sanger@greenwaypartners.net).
3. Each bid shall be accompanied by cash, a cashier's or certified check, or a bidder's bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California as a surety, made payable to the District, in an amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the maximum amount of the bid. The check or bid bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will execute the Contract Documents and will provide the required payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates within ten (10) days after the notification of the award of the Contract.
4. The successful bidder shall comply with the provisions of the Labor Code pertaining to payment of the generally prevailing rate of wages and apprenticeships or other training programs. The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR>. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contractor in excess of one-half of one percent (1/2 of 1%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
8. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
9. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
10. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: C-46 Solar Contractor License or a C-10 Electrical Contractor's License.
11. (Optional) By approving these bid documents, the Governing Board finds that the Project is substantially complex and unique and therefore requires a retention amount of ___% for the following reasons:.
12. A non-mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Orick Elementary School on Tuesday, May 16, 2017 at 9:00 a.m. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Project site.

THE JACOBY CREEK SCHOOL DISTRICT REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATIONS ("RFQ") FOR ARCHITECTURAL SERVICES

Jacoby Creek School District is requesting Statements of Qualifications (SOQ) from qualified architectural firms that comply with all requirements set forth by the Office of Public School Construction (OPSC) for new construction and modernization projects throughout the district. It is the District's intent to select an architectural firm to design projects for modernization of the existing campus and construction of new buildings to replace portables.

SUBMITTALS AND DEADLINE

SOQ submittals will be accepted in print form or via email. All submittals must be received by Wednesday, May 17, 2017.

Email submittals:

Submittal of email SOQs is encouraged in lieu of printed submissions, but not required. If an email SOQ is provided, please send in PDF format, not larger than 8MB.

For email submittals, email to the Superintendent, Timothy Parisi, superintendent@jcsk8.org.

Print submittals may be sent to:

Timothy J. Parisi
Jacoby Creek School District
1617 Old Arcata Road
Bayside, CA 95514

This RFQ is neither a formal request for bids, nor an offer by the District to contract with any party responding to this RFQ. This RFQ does not commit the District to award a contract or to reimburse any applicant for costs incurred in submitting qualifications. The District, in its sole discretion, reserves the right to interview any, all, or none of the firms submitting to this RFQ; or to amend or cancel part or in its entirety this RFQ.

Date Published: May 4, 2017, May 11, 2017

SELECTION CRITERIA

Qualifications submitted in response to this RFQ will be evaluated on the following criteria.

- Depth of public school master planning, design, and modernization experience (particularly at the elementary school level)
- Creative project problem solving
- Project architect's experience in successful and timely approval of firm's projects through Division of the State Architect.
- Project architect's knowledge of applicable State regulations and California school construction/modernization practice
- Responsiveness to the RFQ – breadth and quality of response
- References from clients

The successful firm will demonstrate, through its qualifications submittal, that it has carefully studied the District's expectations as stated in the RFQ. This submission must show that the firm has the professional capability and personality to be a full service architect who will facilitate and oversee bidding, construction, close-out and occupancy of each project.

STATEMENT OF QUALIFICATIONS

The Statement of Qualifications should include the following items. Please respond in the same order/format listed below.

- Cover Letter / Letter of Interest
- Firm Organization; Credentials and Background
- Relevant Experience - Depth of public school master planning, design, and modernization experience (particularly at the high school level)
- Project Team – Identify design team members and their relevant experience
- List of Client Satisfaction / References - List at least four (4) education client references for whom your firm has performed similar project services.

The schedule for selection of the architectural firm is as follows:

Issuance of RFQ	April 27, 2017 on the Jacoby Creek School District web site, http://jcsk8.org/
RFQ's due to District	May 17, 2017
Interviews	To Be Determined
Selection of Architects	Regular Board Meeting, Thursday, June 15, 2017

CAUTIONARY STATEMENTS:

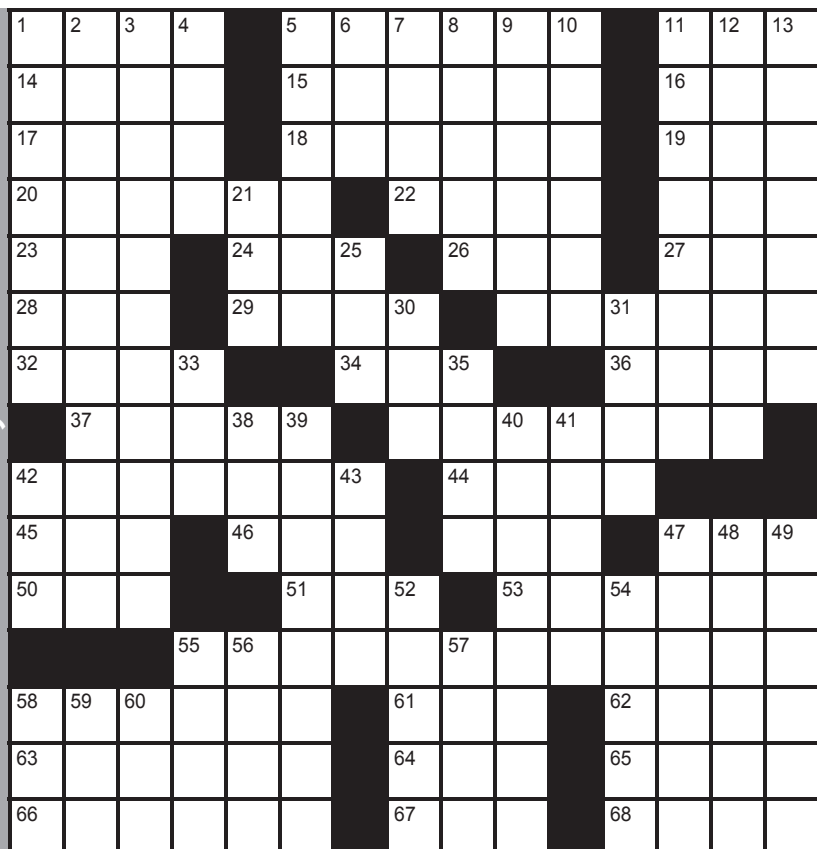

1. Direct contact with members of the School Board. Respondents are warned that any direct contact with a member of the Board of Education regarding a proposal is likely to result in that firm's disqualification from the process.
2. Sufficient information has been presented in this RFQ to submit a proposal. The District requests that firms direct all questions in writing, via e-mail to Timothy Parisi (superintendent@jcsk8.org) and not contact the teachers or maintenance staff directly. These individuals are not directly involved in the RFQ process but may be involved in the design process.
